FED CATCHES UP WITH RESTART REALITY

The Fed has now made a meaningful upgrade to its inflation outlook by embracing a more pronounced overshoot of its 2% target. We view this upgrade as the Fed catching up with the restart dynamics. While the upgrade largely reflects the incoming data since the last meeting, there is a notable change: The Fed now sees the ongoing inflation surge as contributing to achieving its objective as opposed to focusing on its transitory nature (continued on Page 3).

LINEWEAVER WEALTH ADVISORS ENTERS THE TOP 20 IN THE CRAIN'S 2021 LIST OF REGISTERED INVESTMENT ADVISERS

We are humbled and excited to share that we have been ranked in the top 20 of Crain's Cleveland's annual list of Registered Investment Advisors based on assets under management. We were especially excited to move up on the list, after ranking in the top 25 in 2019 and 2020.

While this is a great milestone and accomplishment for us, we know that there are really two reasons for it: a great staff, and client trust. Our staff work hard and go the extra mile for clients, and in turn clients trust us, use us as a valued sounding board, and introduce us to their family and friends. To us, there is no higher recognition.

We also believe in personal service. We know how frustrated people are with phone trees and digital assistants where they have to answer questions, and are often transferred and re-routed. We live in a fast-paced world that requires cutting edge technology and the latest market analysis to make smart, informed decisions for all our clients. But, when it comes to service, we believe in a personal touch. You'll always speak with a person, and we pride ourselves on getting you answers to your questions in 24 hours or less.

For nearly 30 years our team of qualified, experienced, and credentialed professionals has provided our private and corporate clients with a plethora of options for their financial needs. Our success lies with our continued commitment to providing clients with sound advice, world class customer service, and accessible resources for their current needs and future aspirations.

We believe that everyone needs a Financial Quarterback –an experienced and knowledgeable advisor to coordinate the members of your team, and to help make sure your customized financial plan is considered from every angle. Through our WealthWatch Center, clients have access to world-class professionals that can help them with any financial, tax, legal, or insurance needs.

We understand the fast-paced world we live in and every day our team continues to grow and learn in order to perform at their very best. We are excited about our continued duty to provide for our clients. We're extremely grateful to Crain's, our wonderful clients, and our dedicated staff for this important recognition.

MADISON YUZWA CROWNED MISS OHIO'S OUTSTANDING TEEN

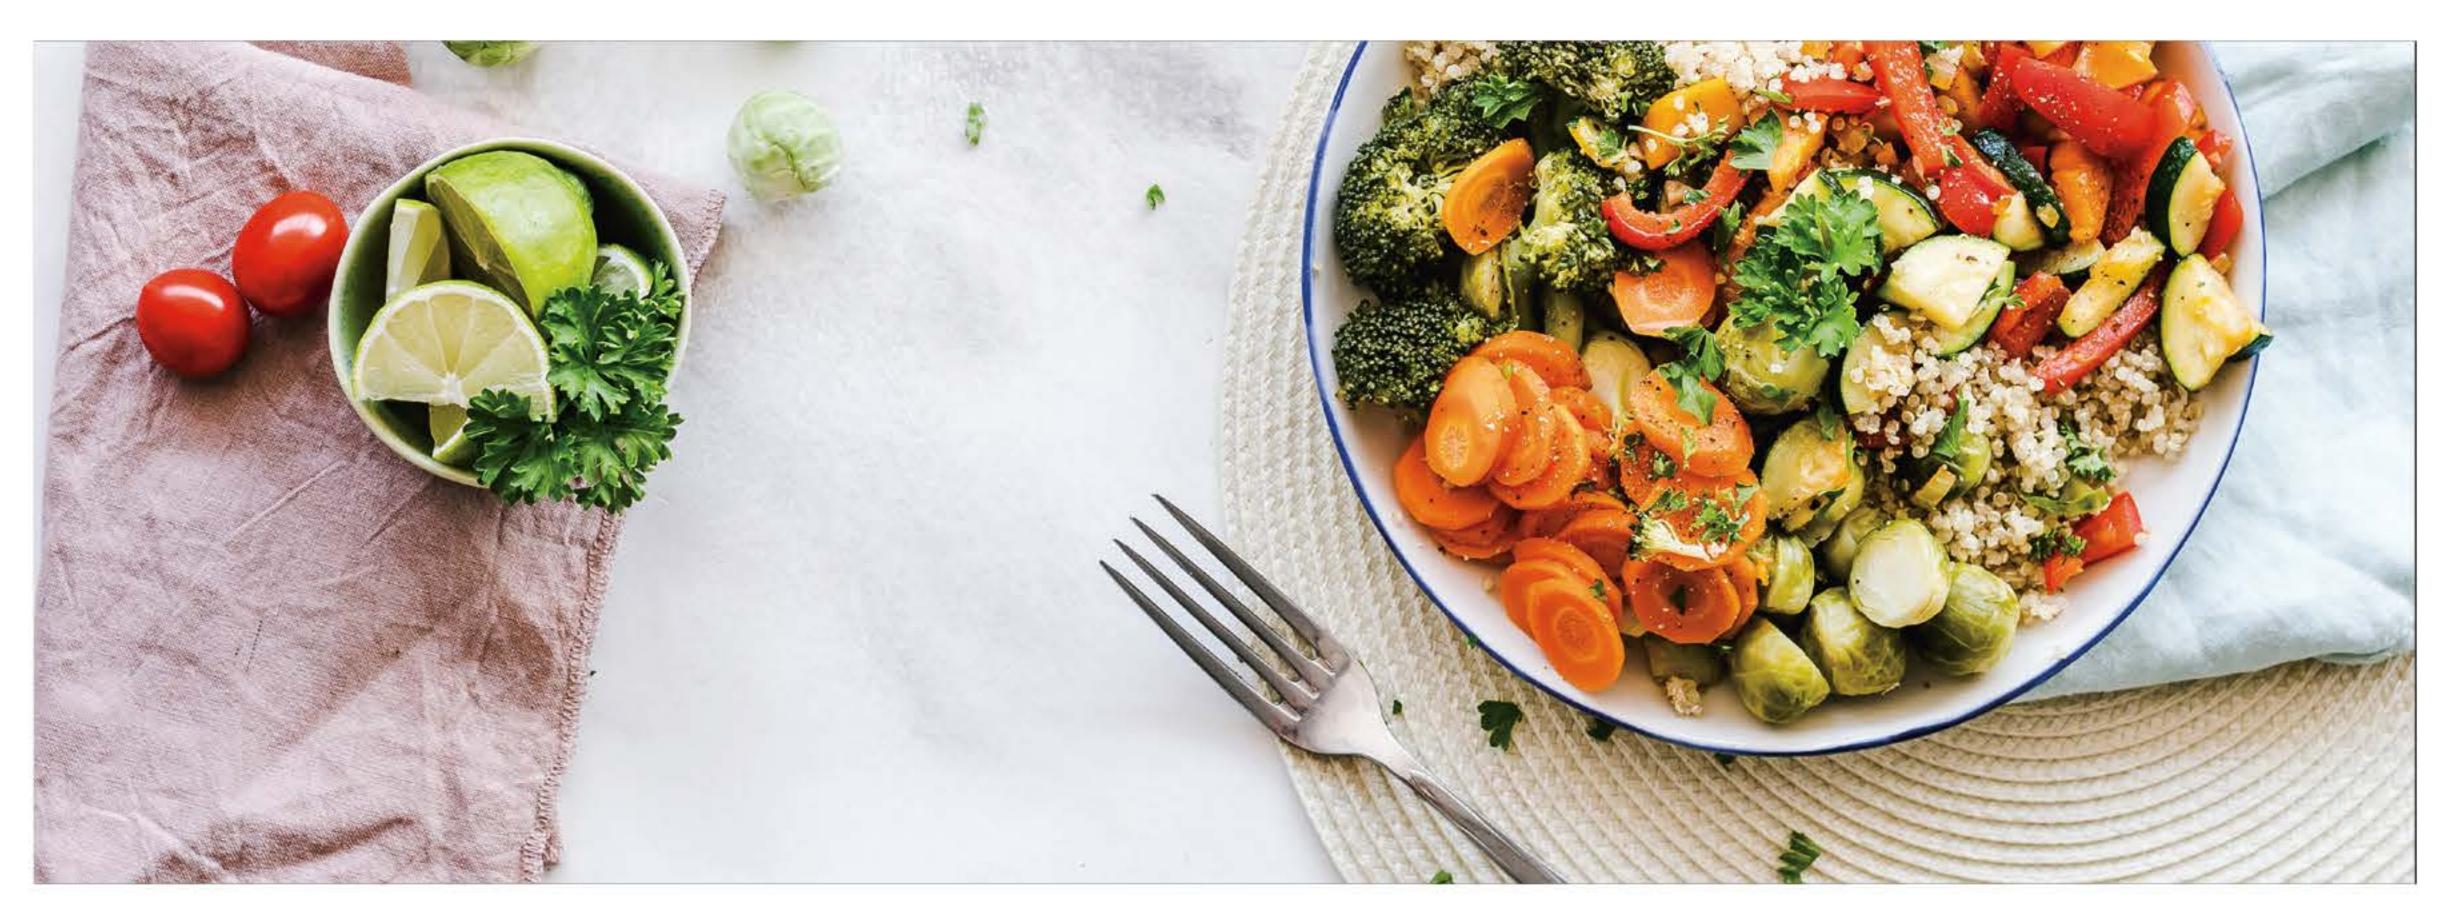

On Tuesday, June 15th, Madison Yuzwa, the granddaughter of Lineweaver Financial client Ann Yuzwa was crowned Miss Ohio's Outstanding Teen at the Renaissance Theater in Mansfield, Ohio. Madison also won the talent segment of the competition with her high energy, power tumbling routine. She has been dreaming and working toward this experience since the age of 9 when she took the stage as a Miss Ohio Princess. Madison will move on to compete nationally representing the state of Ohio at Miss America's Outstanding Teen July 28-30th in Universal, Orlando, Florida.

Her social initiative includes promoting confidence in youth and teens through her platform; F.I.T. to be Confident. Using specific guidelines set by the American Heart Association, Madison incorporates exercise, nutrition, and self-acceptance to help empower young people's confidence.

Madison is a recent Summa Cum Laude graduate of North Royalton High School and resident of Broadview Heights. She will be attending The Ohio State University in the fall majoring in Pharmacy through the Early Assurance to Doctorate program. You can also look for Madison cheering on the Buckeyes this coming football season as a rostered varsity cheerleader.

'SUPERFOODS:' FAD OR FACT?

WHAT ARE SUPERFOODS?

Currently, there is no set scientific definition for what counts as a superfood trusted source. Generally speaking, the term describes foods rich in nutrients and known to offer significant health benefits.

Superfood products are ubiquitous in the wellness world. For example, typing superfood into a well-known e-commerce search engine offers page after page of products branded as superfoods, including coffee creamers, green tea powders, dried fruits, and supplements, some of which are prohibitively expensive.

Many health experts are wary of the term superfood and for good reason. There is no set definition of the word and no regulations surrounding the use of the term on packaging labels.

Because of this, there is no guarantee that a product with the superfood label offers any special health benefits or contains certain nutrients.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Even though there is no set definition of a superfood, there is no denying the health benefits of some foods labeled as superfoods, such as berries, citrus fruits, cruciferous vegetables, garlic, and green tea.

While incorporating foods that are considered superfoods into the diet is likely to benefit overall health, it's important to focus more on the overall quality of the diet rather than on specific foods.

Consuming a nutritious, balanced diet that is especially rich in vegetables and fruits, no matter if they carry the superfood label or not, is one of the best ways to promote health and reduce the risk of various health conditions.

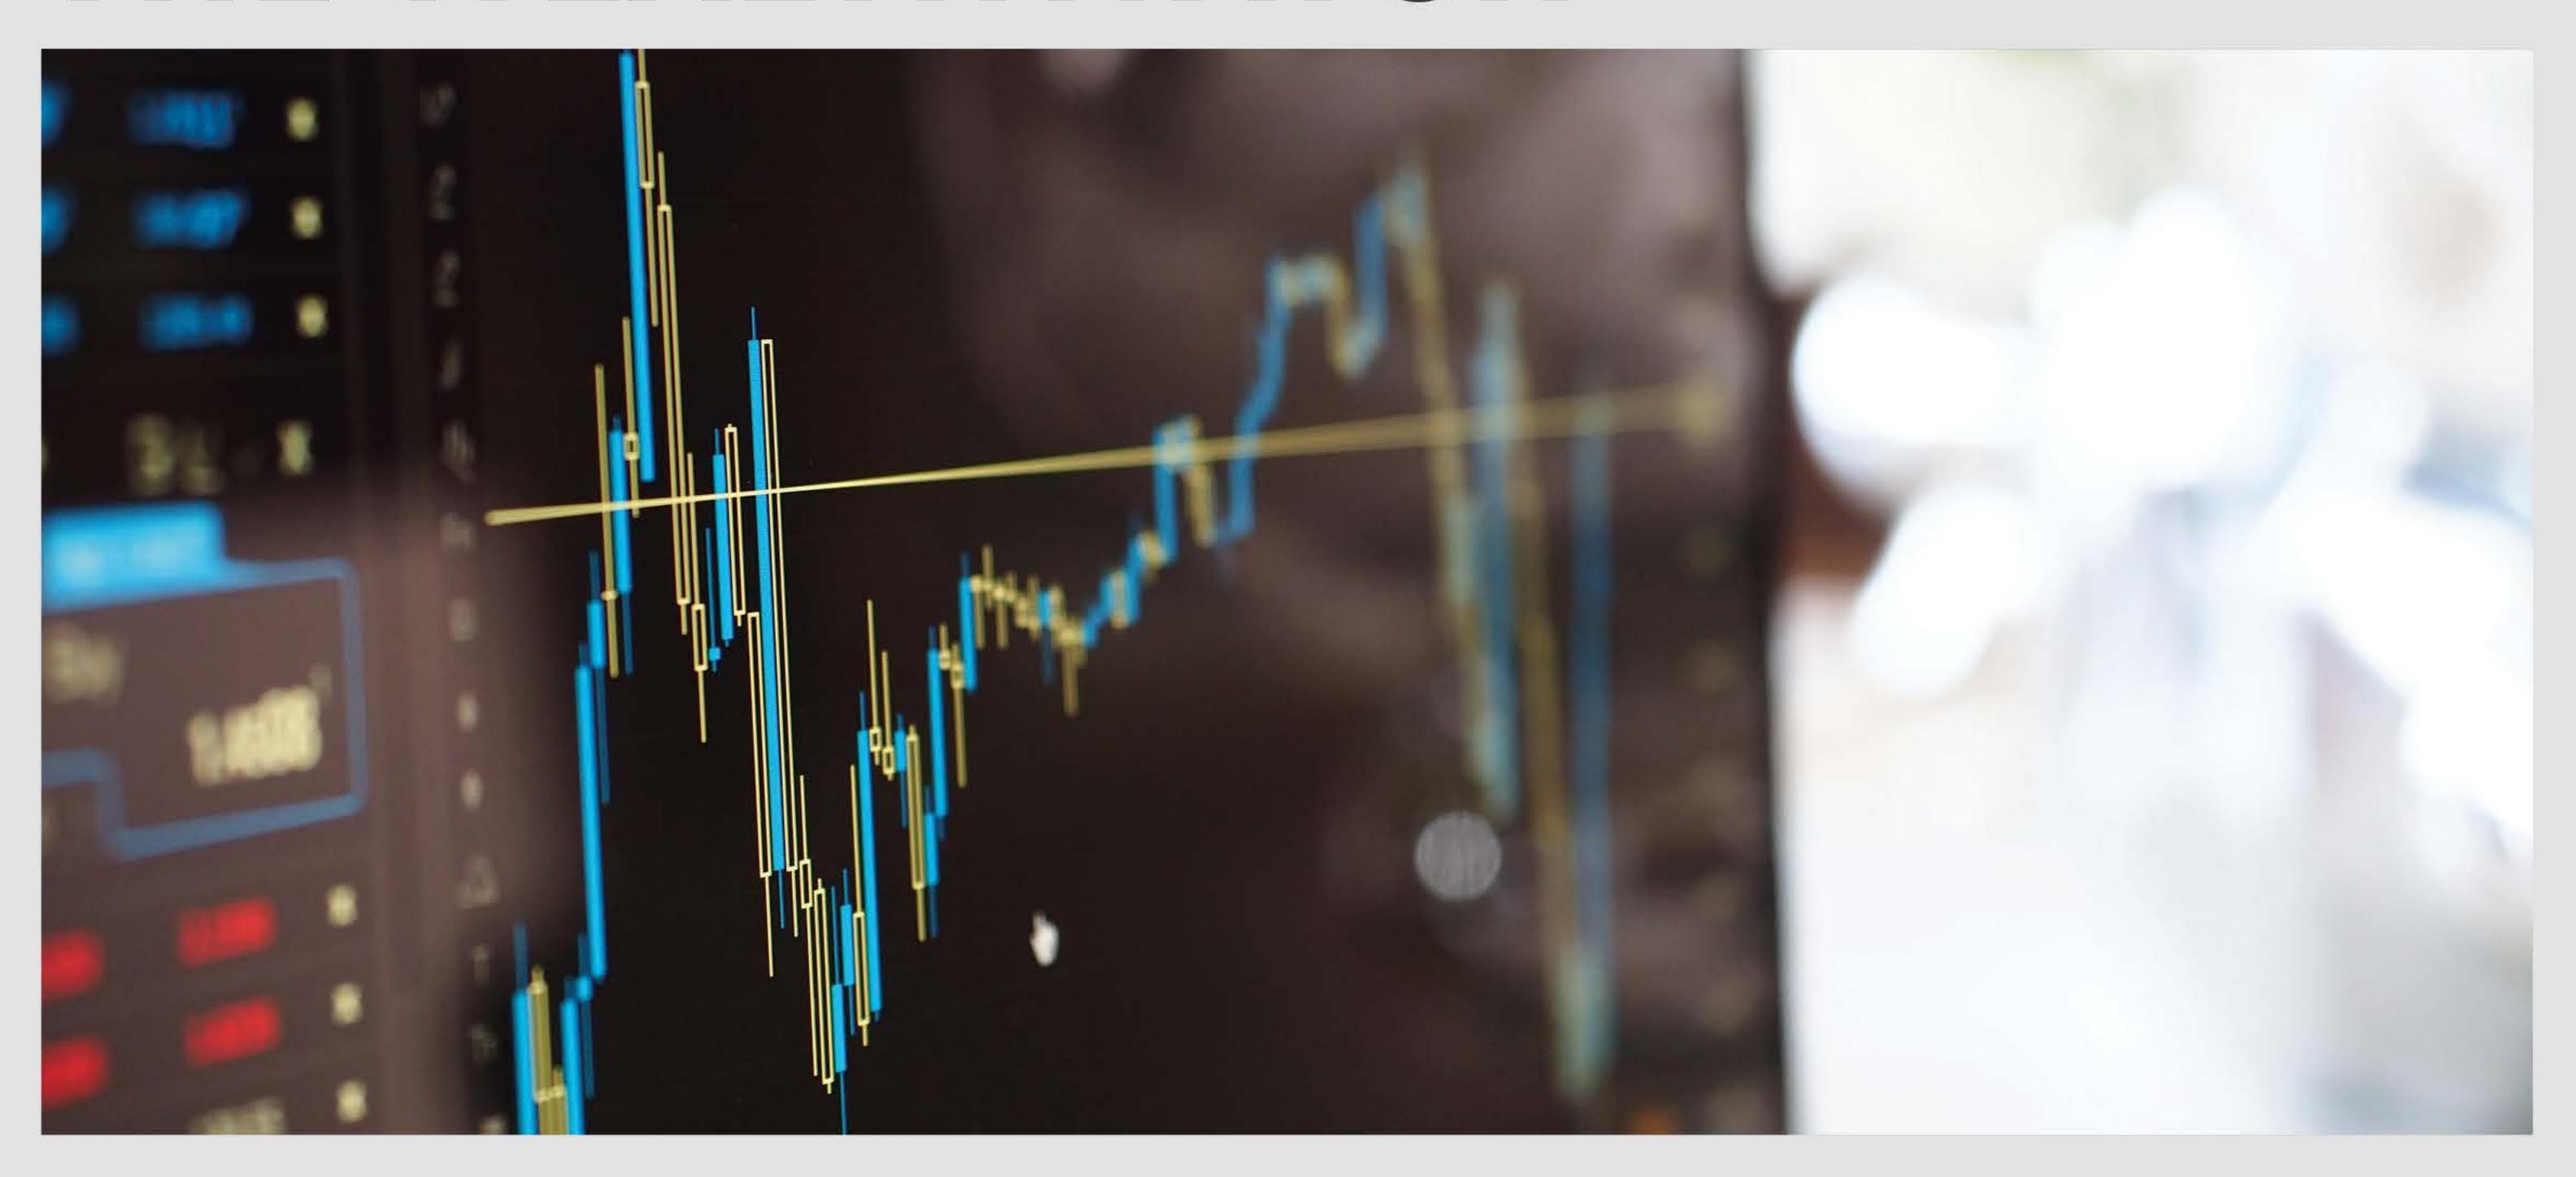

Did you know: Nutritionists sometimes label certain foods as superfoods, while they acknowledge there is no accepted definition for the term.

Most of us have heard of "superfoods," foods so highly nutritious that they might seem almost miraculous. Yet what is fact and what fiction when it comes to these foods? In this Honest Nutrition feature, we investigate.

Ultimately, the Fed's outlook implies a more muted response to rising inflation
than in the past.
This and the economic restart
keep us pro-risk.

The Fed surprised markets by embracing higher inflation and heralding a lift-off from zero rates in 2023, rather than 2024. We think this could add to its new framework's credibility as long as last week's fall in inflation expectations does not persist.

01 FED'S OUTLOOK SHIFT

Fed officials embraced higher 2021 inflation as contributing to their medium-term policy objective, opening the door to a 2023 lift-off.

02 CONSISTENT WITH NEW FRAMEWORK

We see this shift as consistent with the Fed's new framework, implying a much more muted response to inflation and supporting risk assets.

03 DATA WATCH

Global purchasing managers' index (PMI) and other sentiment data this week will help investors gauge the status of the economic restart.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Our bottom line: We believe the Fed's new outlook will not translate into significantly higher policy rates any time soon. This, combined with the powerful restart, underpins our pro-risk stance. Large cash balances held by investors and no obvious signs of financial vulnerabilities give us additional confidence. We prefer to take risk in equities and remain underweight bonds on valuations. Within equities, we have been warming up to cyclical stocks as the restart broadens globally, as reflected in an overweight call on UK equities and our upgrading of European equities to neutral earlier this year. We may see bouts of market volatility as markets test the Fed's resolve to stay "behind the curve" on inflation. Any temporary spikes in rates could challenge emerging market assets in particular, but we advocate staying invested and looking through any turbulence as the New nominal plays out.

DID YOU KNOW:

Some cats are allergic to people. Cats get seasonal allergies to pollen and grass, and some have year-round allergies to fleas and dust mites. In rare cases, cats can even be allergic to people. When cats do have a bad reaction to us, it's usually caused by residue from our perfume, soap or laundry detergent.
